Death of H. B. Davis.

death of H. B. Davis, in his 71st year, Heman Barnum Davis was born in Calais, September 13, 1836, where his parents resided until he was about 8 years old, when they moved to Montpelier. At the age of 10 he began to work for his board on the farms in the neighborhood with the privilege of attending school in the winter. When only 15 years old he was apprenticed to E. P. Walton of the Vermont Watchman. This was in March, 1851, and from that day until his death, nearly 55 years, he was in the printing business, being one of the oldest, if not the oldest, printer in Vermont. In 1858 he went to St. Johnsbury to become the foreman of the St. Johnsbury Caledonian where he rendered most faithful service for thirty years. In the spring of 1889 he came to this village and established the Lyndonville Journal, which paper he printed for three years and then sold to Bullock & Wells. Mr. Davis then moved to Bellows Falls and conducted the job office of the Bellows Falls Times. In the fall of 1902 he sold this business to Dix & Gobie and Jan. 10, 1903, returned to this village and leased the job department of the Lyndonville Journal, About this time he admitted his daughter, Miss Nellie M. Davis, into the firm and the business was conducted under the firm name of H. B. Davis & Co. On Dec. 24, 1903, they opened a new job office in the Masonic block where the business will be carried on.

Mr. Davis married in 1860 Sallie M Woods of St. Johnsbury and two child-ren were born to them. Mrs. Davis and Miss Nellie Davis are still living. He was an active member of the Universalist church and Past Grand of Caledonia Lodge, No. 6, I. O. O. F., and Moose River Encampment of St. Johnsbury. While editor of the Journal he took a lively interest in village affairs and it was largely through his efforts that the Village Improvement Society was established, He was a man who made friends with ev rybody and never failed to seek out an opportunity to do some act of kind-The funeral was held from his late home Saturday afternoon and was largely attended by the townspeople and by St. Johnsbury friends. There was a beautiful display of floral tributes, including designs from the Odd Fellows fraternity. The scripture was read by Rev. E. G. French, the prayer was given by Rev. I. W. McLaughlin and Rev. A. Francis Walch of St. Johnsbury spoke appreciatively of the virtues of the deceased, his kindness, his love of the home and above all his long life of faithful service to mankind and his maker. The interment was at the Lyndon Center cemetery and the bearers were C. M. Darling and Dr. F. H. Davis of this village, S. J. Hastings of Waterford, O. H. Henderson of St. Johnsbury, Editor Arthur F. Stone of the St. Johnsbury CALEDONIAN and Editor Charles T. Walter of the St. Johnsbury Republican.

Educational Institute. The institute under the auspices of the educational department of the state was held here Thursday, and the program as arranged by Mason S. Stone, state superintendent of education, and C. H. Dempsey of St. Johnsbury, county examiner, was carried out with a few changes. The public took much interest in the meetings and there were several present from the surrounding towns auxious to hear about the proposed consolidation of towns for the new supervision. The principal address of the morning was by Clark P. Howland, the new principal of St. Johnsbury Academy, upon Direct Moral Training in School." The theme was continued in the afternoon by an address by Rev. E. G. French upon the special subject, "Moral Training in the Home." The rest of the afternoon was occupied by Supt. Stone, who explained the features of the new law. Music Hall was fairly well filled in the evening at the public meeting and Rev. E. G. French presided. The addresses were interspersed with both vocal and instrumental music. Supt. Stone was the first speaker and briefly outlined the object of the meetings and made a strong plea for better education in the smaller schools. He was followed by Arthur F. Stone, editor of the St. Johnsbury Caledonian, who made a plea for forestry, citing numerous instances of the ruthless destruction of our forests and the necessity of conserving this almost priceless heritage. Hon. E. B. Flinn of Springfield was the last speaker and made an eloquent plea for a new and greater Vermont. He said,

"We must have confidence in our town, we must have confidence in our business men, we must have confidence in our enterprises. The trouble in Vermont has been want of confidence in our own state so that men and money have been sent west. After our investors in the west had lost their money, they began to invest at home and the result is that townslike Springfield are having a boom and it is a boom built upon actual prosperity and enterprise. We must do everything here in the state to keep it abreast of the other states, and one thing which we must do is to teach our men and women to be self-respecting, which means our method of education. Our schools must not convey the impression that manual labor is degrading, for it is not. A healthy man cannot respect himself unless he will support nimself, and he is not worthy of respect. Some men can support themselves better by their brains and some better by their hands, and both kinds of labor are dignified and necessary to life. The way we can bring about a new and greater Vermont is to stand shoulder to shoulder, work hand in hand, and have confidence in each other and rejoice in their

who died there of pneumonia. The body of Mrs. Curtis, of Springfield, Mass., a niece of Mrs. E. M. Campbell and W. F. Stoddard, was brought to West Burke for burial Thursday night, accompanied by her husband and two small children. She was the daughter of Riley Richardson. The funeral was held on Sunday of little Clara, the only child of Fred and Agnes Folsom, Clara Bailey Folsom was an unusually bright and attractive child, only 17 months old. Six weeks ago she was stricken with pneumonia, and her hard struggle with this dread disease left her too exhausted to rally from its effects. Her death is a particularly sad one, and she leaves a large family of friends and relatives whose hopes and interests centered around her.
